INTRODUCTION

The National Research and Information Center on Crime and Delinquency publishes annually three issues of the International Bibliography on Crime and Delinquency. This issue is the third for 1963.

Three of its features deserve your attention. The first is the way it is compiled, the second is its format, and the third, its author index.

How the Bibliography is Compiled -- The International Bibliography is compiled, for the most part, from secondary sources, such as national, trade, library, and university bibliographies covering articles from periodicals, government publications, books, pamphlets, dissertations, and reports from all parts of the world. In addition, the Excerpta Criminologica Foundation and the library of the National Council on Crime and Delinquency cooperate with us in examining issues of over four hundred journals.* Items of only one page are excluded, as are book reviews and reprints of articles (except where the original source is not clear).

Because of our reliance on secondary sources, the subject headings are rather broad. In general, all areas of crime and delinquency are covered by the International Bibliography. In the field of forensic medicine, however, only items relating to forensic psychiatry are included. Entries are made for those criminal codes not readily available to the reader. References to police investigation

* The reader should note that the National Research and Information Center on Crime and Delinquency makes no claim as to the availability of any publication listed in the Bibliography.

techniques, traffic offenses, political crimes, and "crimes against humanity" (e.g., genocide) are excluded.

The bibliographic entries for this issue were compiled from material received by us between March 31, 1963 and July 15, 1963. This means that entries from the United States and some parts of Western Europe cover 1962 and 1963 publications, while those from other countries may cover 1959, 1960, and 1961 items as well.

The Format -- The printed lines separating the entries are there to enable the user to cut, remove, and mount each reference in order to set up his own cumulative bibliographic file. If further indexing is desired, each reference may be mounted on an edge-coded card, such as the McBee Keysort.

The Author Index -- The author index lists alphabetically each author's name and the subject headings under which his works may be found. Entries without identified authors will be found only in the main body (subject index) of the Bibliography.

This issue completes Volume I of the International Bibliography on Crime and Delinquency. Please read the announcement concerning Volume II which is printed on the inside back cover.
